“

I help individuals and teams untangle communication knots to improve collaboration and elevate workplace connection.

After decades of work that has included writing, publishing and research, I have made a key discovery: The core of communication lies in the power of words. Specifically, the words we hear throughout our life which form the stories we tell ourselves which, in turn, influence the words we say to others.

Through my coaching and training, I help leaders identify and unpack the influences that can distort communication. Once we clear the distortions, my clients are able to untangle communication knots and connect with more awareness, confidence and clarity.

I also deliver workshops and talks to universities, leadership organizations and networking groups to cultivate clear, effective, and productive communication practices.

Nancy Burger guides executives and teams to develop actionable strategies that foster emotionally healthy cultures, create boundaries, and cultivate transparency in a high-stakes environment of rampant change.
